Every child has a God-given right to a happy home, which shall furnish the best conditions for normal, helpful growth. It has been well said that "Criminals come out of homes that are, in many respects, real homes, but have in them certain conditions which aid in releasing the evil that is in the child's nature, and in suffocating or starving the good." It is one thing to teach positive virtues and the avoidance of vices; it is quite another thing to provide a fostering atmosphere which shall reinforce that teaching. . . . Our children need more of the parents' interest and coöperation in their little plans, pleasures and aims. We endeavor to surround them with every physical comfort possible, yet there is the need of the heart, a craving for more companionship of father and mother. It is not what we do for our children that makes them love us, but it is what we do with them. "Every bit of coöperation, whether in work or play, is a tie that binds."—MRS. DAVID O. MEARS.
